Harry's legacy from his great-uncle, a talking parrot, proves to be a much more exciting gift than he ever imagined.

To each character of Australian war history is attached a story inevitably of bravery, courage, and humour, and Mad Harry is no exception. Yet there is to his story a distinguishing significance, for Mad Harry is Australia's most decorated soldier.

The World Health Organization's post-World War II work on the epidemiology and classification of mental disorders and its vision of a "world psyche." In 1946, the World Health Organization undertook a project in social psychiatry that aimed to discover the epidemiology and classification of mental disorders. In Mad by the Millions, Harry Y-Jui Wu examines the WHO's ambitious project, arguing that it was shaped by the postwar faith in technology and expertise and the universalizing vision of a "world psyche." Wu shows that the WHO's idealized scientific internationalism laid the foundations of today's highly highly metricalized global mental health system.

"How mental disorders became comparable worldwide through the making of metrics, focussing on the WHO's first international social psychiatry project"--

"For the first time, a Congresswoman and her son reveal how he survived a ten-year battle with opioid abuse--and what their family's journey to recovery can teach us about finding hope amidst the unspeakable. When Madeleine Dean discovered that her son, Harry, was stealing from the family to feed a painkiller addiction, she was days away from taking the biggest risk of her life: running for statewide office in Pennsylvania. For years, she had thought something was wrong. Harry was losing weight and losing friends. He had lost the brightness in his eyes and voice, changing from a young boy with boundless enthusiasm for life to a shadow of himself, chasing something she could not see. At first, she chalked it up to maternal worry, but now her worst fears had come to bear. Under Our Roof is the story of a national crisis suffered in the intimacy of so many homes, told with incredible candor through the dual perspectives of a mother rising in politics and a son living a double life, afraid of what would happen if his secret were exposed. Madeleine and Harry reflect on how addiction can ensnare anyone--even those born into stable, loving homes. They discuss the patterns of a family dealing with an unspoken disease, the fear that keeps addicts hiding in shame, and the moments of honesty, faith, and personal insight that led to Harry's recovery. In a country searching for answers to the devastating effects of opioids and drug abuse, Under Our Roof is a ray of hope in the darkness. It is not only a love story between mother and son but an honest account of our most pressing crisis by a family affecting change on a national level"--

Harry Habib and his good friend, Michael Robertson, set out to do a good deed; they want to travel abroad 6,000 miles to support a desperately poor village community. All they need is some help from the MI6, Britain's Secret Intelligence Services. Their peculiar mission soon sees them engrossed in a bizarre adventure in which the antics of these two clueless young people attract worldwide attention. Harry Habib: The boy who upset half the world, is about the experiences of someone who belongs to an oppressed minority group; it is also about one person's frustrated attempts to demand equality in the rights most of us take for granted. Unfortunately for Harry's best friend, Michael, the ensuing chaos resulting from Harry's daring antics makes them the target of fanatics and militant everywhere. Harry and Michael are targeted by rioting, angry mobs for what they regard as Harry's blasphemy; much to the inconvenience of the authorities. The characters maybe comical, but the story is based on real events that have occurred in places where offending those who are different, is embedded in the national psyche.
